Research

A novel rat gingivoperiosteoplasty model 2007-08

After developing a critical-size defect model, we tested two tissue-engineered scaffolds soaked with or without bone morphogenic protein. Bone regeneration was evaluated.

Supervisor: Dr Stephen Warren, New York University Medical Centre, New York
 Research published in the journal of Bone, March 2008;
 Presented in several national and international meetings

Use of the lead hand as a surgeon's hand shield against radiation exposure in theatre 2006

With the collaboration with the Medical Physics Department at St Thomas' Teaching Hospital, London, United Kingdom we proved this approach to be safe. Results published in the European Journal of Plastic Surgery, May 2007.

Presented at ONE AO meeting in Las Vegas, Nevada, February 2015

A comparison of alginate and monolayer culture systems for the expansion of chondrocytes in tissue engineering 1998

Original experimental research at the Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore, London, United Kingdom as part of my Bachelor of Science (Honours) Orthopaedic Science with basic Medical Sciences degree, at University College London, London, United Kingdom.

The laboratory based research resulted in two publications, book chapter, and an oral international presentation
